QUALITY OF EDUCATION

The Diploma of Business Marketing with a specialisation in Event Management is designed to get our graduates jobs when they leave us. Our classes cover the diversity and complexity of event management and the practical aspects of producing and managing events. Students in this course will learn to look critically at an event from the idea to the execution and analyse its success. The course will examine the event concept, how a design comes about, how event managers decide if an event will be profitable and what risk is involved. The promotion, marketing and financial management of events will also be included in this course.

KEY SUBJECTS

As well as receiving a solid grounding in all aspects of event management, key topics covered in this diploma include: event production fundamentals; event staging and production; and event regulations and compliance. Students will also learn about the scope of event production; the skills base required of the professional event manager at the introductory level; methodology used by event managers to coordinate the detailed planning and production roll-out of an event; operational planning and the conceptual framework; and developing the overall concept, theme and format for a major event comprising multiple components. Students also undertake a major Business Enterprise Project, which is a group project that is guided by a mentor during trimesters two and three. Students plan and execute a business idea that aims to deliver a profit to shareholders, and value to customers, while building effective working relationships with team members. Student groups form a company, register a business name, develop, produce, market, promote and sell a real product and manage accounting, shares issues and declaration of dividends. Students also spend time as an intern with a professional events company.
